

Knut Ward Heimdal

PhD Candidate in Economics, University of Oslo
knut.heimdal (at) gmail.com · knutheimdal.no

Position

PhD Research Fellow, Department of Economics, University of Oslo, 2021–present. Research on fiscal policy, wage formation, and fertility using Norwegian registry data. Advisor: Martin Blomhoff Holm. Expected PhD completion: autumn 2027 (position extended by parental leave).

Education

MA in Economics, University of Oslo, 2017–2019. Coursework in public economics, monetary policy, statistics, and the PhD course in applied microeconometrics. Thesis on the employment effects of chatbots.

BA in International Studies, University of Oslo, 2013–2017. Specialization in economics; thesis on Bitcoin and monetary theory.

Exchange year, Freie Universität Berlin, 2014–2015. Economics and international relations, taught mainly in German.

Research in progress

Field of Study and Fertility. The causal effect of field of study on women's fertility timing, identified from admission cutoffs in Norway's centralized university admission system.

Permanent Local Fiscal Multipliers (with Amund H. Kordt and Martin B. Holm). Local government spending multipliers estimated from municipal fiscal shocks in Norwegian administrative data.

Wage Determination and Coordination (with Amund H. Kordt). The role of coordination in wage setting for aggregate outcomes; a minimal model tested on Norwegian and OECD data.

Professional experience

Adviser, Norwegian Ministry of Finance, 2019–2021. National budget work in the Budget Department, covering the portfolio of the Ministry of Education and Research; drafted and presented the ministry's assessments of budget proposals for government deliberation.

Student engagement, Monetary Policy Department, Norges Bank, 2017–2019 (part-time). Contributed to the Monetary Policy Report in the unit for analysis and forecasting of the Norwegian economy.

Coordinator and speaker, Confederation of Norwegian Enterprise (NHO), 2015–2017 (part-time). Delivered NHO's educational programmes on Norwegian business and Norway's relationship with the EU.

Journalist, Vårt Land (2017, politics and world desk) and Universitas (2016–2017, news).

Teaching

University of Oslo. Master's level: macroeconomics and monetary policy (primary assignments), econometrics, labor economics, and corporate governance, 2021–present. Bachelor's level: seminar leader in Macroeconomic Analysis, 2017.

Service

Board member, Department of Economics, University of Oslo, representing temporary academic staff, 2023–2027.

Languages

Norwegian (native) · English (fluent) · German (proficient)